MAYOR'S WEEKLY NEWS REPORT

To the Citizens of
The Town of Appomattox:

You five people are again to be congratulated for the special efforts you have been making during the past two weeks toward cleaning and beautifying both public and private property.

In the event anyone has a vacant lot that you want burned off, if you will notify the fire chief, town manager or mayor, I feel sure it can be arranged to have it done in the very near future by our Volunteer Fire Company.

During the period when most everyone is doing some burning of trash, please be most caerful and see that the fire stays under control at all times.

Let's all be very mindful of the proper courtesies that we should extend to our most efficient Volunteer Fire Company. Your cooperation and assistance toward improvement of this problem will be greatly appreciated by all concerned.

Friday and Saturday, April 18 and 19 have been declared "Bargain Days" here in Appomattox. All of the merchants are making a special effort to offer you wonderful bargains, I just hope that all the citizens in town and throughout the county will give the merchants your wholehearted support doing these two days. You can rest assured that there will be no prking problem for the town has a free parking lot which you are welcome to use as long as you wish. Let's make two big days of it.

Please bear in mind the Safety Campaign which is being promoted and do your part in helping keep Appomattox free from all accidents.

Your counsel and advice on all public matters is welcomed at all times.

Sincerely,
C. T. Moses, Jr.

QUESTIONS OF THE WEEK

(Editor's note: Here are the questions asked most frequently by Virginia farmers during the past week, as reported by county agricultural agents. Staff members of the VPI Agricultural Extension Service and/or Experiment Sation supply the answers.)

Q. Is it too late to seed alfalfa and permanent pasture?

A. It is past the recommended seeding dates, and you will be taking a chance if you seed now, despite the delayed season in most of Virginia. If May is hot and dry, the seedlings would not have a chance to develop.

Q. Is it too late to use granulated heptachlor on alfalfa to control the weevil?

A. The granulated form can be used until the alfalfa is two to three inches high. After that you should depend on the spray treatment.

Q. When should heptachlor in spray form be used to control the alfalfa weevil?

A. As soon as the alfalfa shows weevil injury. Keep a close watch on the fields. A grayish color on the plants is a sign that weevils are present.

Q. How can I feed beet or citrus pulp as a substitute for hay and silage for my dairy herd until small grain can be grazed?

A. Five pounds of beet or citrus pulp is equal to about six pounds of hay, and can be substituted at that rate.

Q. Is it too late to use 2,4-D to control wild garlic in lawns, or in clover and grass pastures?

A. Yes, it is getting too late for the application to do much good.

Q. Will heptachlor give a bad odor or taste to peanuts if used instead of aldrin

A. No, heptachlor is acceptable and recommended.

Q. What can be mixed with fertilizer to kill grubs, wireworms, cutworms, etc., in the soil?

A. Aldrin or hepiachlor.

Q. How can I tell if my elms have dutch elm disease? Are they likely to be affected this year?

A. A laboratory diagnosis must be made to determine the presence of this disease. Collect a sample of five or six recently damaged twigs and send them to the Southeastern Forest Experiment Station, Federal Building, Asheville, N. C.

Medical Findings Often Result Of 'Happy Accident'

CHICAGO — Most "accident-prone" individuals are considered a liability in their work, but there are some "happy accident-prone" people who are pretty important.

They're the researchers, scientists, and doctors who accidentally discover some important thing while looking for something else, according to a special article in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Among the most famous of medicine's "happy accidents" are Fleming's discovery of penicillin when he left a Petri dish uncovered and van Leeuwenhoeck's discovery of bacteria when he focused a magnifying glass on a drop of water instead of on a fly's leg. Out of these grew the "penicillin age" and the science of bacteriology.

This ability to make some valuable or pleasant discovery without deliberately looking for it is called serendipity.

The most recent serendipitous event to make headlines was Dr. Winston H. Price's discovery of a common cold vaccine. This researcher at the Johns Hopkins School of Hygiene and Public Health was not looking for a common cold preventive, but was working on isolating influenza viruses.

Some of medicine's happy accidents include:

—The conquest of smallpox after Edward Jenner recalled the boast of a former milkmaid that she was immune because she had had cowpox—which then became the agent for mass immunity against smallpox.

—The development of the stethoscope after a Paris physician, Rene Theophile Laennec, saw children tapping messages to each other along opposite ends of a discarded plank. He recognized in the game the principle of the stethoscope.

30-Ton Killer Roams Coastline

LOS ANGELES—A 30-ton killer, as vicious as a shark but as playful as a porpoise, roams the California coast, making forays into such well-known waters as Santa Monica and Monterey Bays.

This is the killer whale, which has been an object of special study by Dr. Richard Boolootian, zoologist at the University of California, Los Angeles.

Dr. Boolootian has observed these whales killing cormorants, apparently for the sheer pleasure of killing. They seize the birds, kill them, and spit out the bodies.

He has also seen the marine killer come in as close as four or five feet offshore, leaping out of the water, swimming on its back, and engaging in other playful antics much in the manner of a porpoise.

"There is no record of a killer whale killing a human being," Dr. Boolootian says. "People just don't stop to argue with them."

Visual Checkups Aid School Work

CHICAGO — Approximately 450 textbooks have to be studied nowadays during the school years from first to twelfth grade. And from the grades to college more than 90 per cent of school failures can be blamed on poor reading ability. The startling fact is that from 50 to 70 per cent of the slow-reading pupils have normal or even superior intelligence but are handicapped by seeing problems.

When you read a page of print, your eyes make a series of stops. The number of stops depends on the number of words your eyes can grab at each fixation. The slow reader (150 words or less a minute) stops at almost every word and quickly tires. The fast reader takes in several words at each brief pause.

Comics, TV Mix With Good Books

LOS ANGELES — Parents shouldn't hold books up to their children as "something good" while deriding television and comics as a "waste of time."

This attitude, according to Mrs. Doris Ryder Watts, visiting lecturer in children's literature at the University of California, Los Angeles, creates the impression in a youngster's mind that books, like castor oil, are good for you—but are most unpleasant.

This leads to erroneous conclusion that if suspense, excitement, and thrills are wanted, one must turn to the comics, TV, or movies.

Mrs. Watts believes there is no reason why young people shouldn't think of a book as a synonym for adventure.
